

Contributors

Theresa Bailey graduated from DePaul University in June 2016 with a double major in Writing, Rhetoric, and Discourse and English Literature. She currently works as a union administrator in Chicago, Illinois, and she hopes that any future academic articles she writes will continue to include puns or be about them.

Katelyn Guichelaar graduated from Calvin College with a degree in Linguistics and Literature. She taught English as a Second Language for a year at a primary school in Budapest, Hungary before continuing her education at the University of Michigan. She expects to graduate with a master's degree in Higher Education with a concentration in student academic services and international education in December 2018.

Gina Keplinger is now a first year M.A. student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln studying Composition and Rhetoric. After graduation, she plans to earn a Ph.D. Gina is most looking forward to changing her prefix from “Ms.” to “Dr.”

Kira Pratt is a junior studying Sociology and Media Studies at the University of Denver. Additionally, she is a member of the Pioneer Leadership Program, pursuing a minor in Leadership Studies. Kira has already been published in her school's writing journal WRIT Large, and she is very interested in continuing to do research. She plans to attend graduate school after finishing her degree.

Taylor Rayfield graduated from the University of Central Florida in 2017 with a B.A. in History Honors. He is currently pursuing an M.A. in History at the same institution, with the eventual goal of receiving a Ph.D. He plans to work on the topic of the politics of imperialism in modern Germany.

Armand St. Pierre graduated from Hofstra University with a degree in mechanical engineering. During his time at Hofstra, he discovered a passion for writing. He currently lives in the Baltimore region.

Maegan Alexis Trinidad is a student of the Burnett Honors College at the University of Central Florida. She is majoring in Marketing with an interest in research and analytics. She currently works as a Student Researcher at the Institute for Economic Competitiveness and assists with marketing research conducted in the university's Behavioral Lab. Upon graduation, she hopes to pursue a career in strategic planning.

Kayla Wiles graduated from Furman University in 2017 with a B.A. in Health Journalism—a major she created through Furman's Individualized Curriculum Program. She has since interned on the external relations team of an international life-sciences organization in the UK, and now works as a science writer for Purdue University's News Service.