

Contributors

Daniel Bell is a graduate of the English Department at Florida State University. He is fascinated by the impact of discourse, economics, and politics on social formation. He is currently a second year Fulbright scholar in Brazil.

Marlee Bennett grew up in Draper, Utah and studied Creative Writing at Utah State University, where she gained the skills and knowledge needed to soon publish her own faith-based children's book series.

Grant Bess is a History and English Teaching dual major and will graduate from Utah State University in 2019.

Jocelyn Bitner majored in English-Teaching at Utah State University and graduated in Fall 2018. She now works as a 9th grade English Language Arts teacher in Davis School District.

Miguel Antonio Colon graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, and has worked as a technical writer, Spanish translator, and social media manager. He is currently working in the life and health insurance industry, utilizing the skills he learned as a proud Professional Writing major.

Savannah Cook graduated from Utah State University in 2017 with a B.A. in English. She loves chocolate, her husband Matt, and Disneyland.

Symone Corbin graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Communication Arts and Sciences.

Mariah Dozé is an African American studies and sociology double major at Emory College, now in her junior year. She is fascinated with the ways in which the skilled use of rhetoric shapes public perception.

Jimmy Dotson was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Morgan Duersch graduated from Utah State University with a degree in creative writing and now works as a marketing manager for a franchising company.

Deonna Edgar was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Savannah Flemming will graduate from Utah State University with a degree in Secondary English Education; she hopes to start her career teaching in the Fall of 2019.

Rachel Hoffman graduated from the University of Missouri-Kansas City in May of 2018 with a degree in English Language & Rhetoric. As a childhood cancer survivor, Children's Mercy Hospital was her second home and occasional prison until she was 21. Although she did not come away unscathed, she is smarter for the experience. She hopes to use her adventures and the resulting enthusiasm for science to inspire the next generation of Katharines and Alices. She is working towards a career as a science teacher in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Karlie Jordan was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Elizabeth Kemmerer graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.

Erik Lanzner graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.

Sarah Lorish is a producer and marketer at a creative agency. She graduated from Penn State in 2017, and continues to write in her everyday life including proposals, marketing copy, and maintaining the blog for her company.

Carolyn Lyle was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Gina Nguyen graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.

Timothy Pedersen was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Justin Peterson was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Devin Prasatek recently graduated from Grand Valley State University. While she still hopes to one day work as an editor, she is happy to pursue other dreams and new experiences in the meantime.

William Rankin is an English major in his senior year at Sewanee University. He is fascinated by poetic analysis and literary theory and plans pursue a graduate degree in the humanities after graduation.

Samantha Resnick is a linguistics major at Pomona College. Now a senior, she has worked at the Writing Center since her sophomore year, where she greatly enjoys the comfy couches and extensive tea collection.

Dawn Rudd was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Taylor Elizabeth Rugg graduated from Hobart and William Smith Colleges in 2017 with Bachelor of Arts degrees in Writing & Rhetoric and War, Warfare, & the Soldier Experience, and earned a Master of Arts in Rhetoric (2018) from Carnegie Mellon University. Her research has focused on the construction and comprehension of the hero identity within the military and veteran population, and she plans to pursue a PhD in Higher Education Administration to contribute to research on student veterans.

McKenna Simmons is a 10th grade English teacher in northern Utah, and loves her family and dogs.

Helene Slinker is now in her final year of a bachelors degree in political science at the University of Missouri - Kansas City, with minors in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies and German Language. Her academic interests include feminist rhetoric, legal rhetoric, immigration, international relations, and social justice. Post-graduation, Helene hopes to attend law school.

Avery Smith graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.

James Stoudt graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.

Cali Tovey was a student in Utah State University's English 3470 course in Fall 2016, taught by Dr. Joyce Kinkead.

Nisheal Watson graduated from Utah State University with a B.A. in English and has earned her M.A. in communication.

Walker Webb graduated from Penn State Berks in spring of 2017, having majored in Professional Writing.