

CONTRIBUTORS

Lauren Augino is in her second year at Utah Valley University in the class of 2009. She is majoring in biology and plans to study animal behavior and wildlife conservation.

Heather Bastian is a doctoral student in composition and rhetoric at the University of Kansas. She has presented at the College Conference of Composition and Communication, and her publications include "Examining Historical Consciousness: A Bakhtinian-Influenced Pedagogy for James Baldwin's 'Going to Meet the Man.'"

Mario Burton graduated from the University of Alabama–Huntsville in 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies and a concentration in English.

Hailey Carmichael will graduate from Furman University in May 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies and in Spanish, and a concentration in Latin American studies. After graduation, she plans to return to Latin America to master the Spanish language in order to employ that skill in her future writing career.

Bill Chewning recently graduated from the University of Maryland–Baltimore County with a bachelor of arts degree in English communication and technology, a minor in writing, and a certificate in media and communications studies. Bill plans to continue exploring the intersections of technology and the teaching of writing in graduate school before pursuing a career in secondary and college-level education.

Beth Clark graduated from the University of Alabama–Huntsville in 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in English and a minor in technical communication. She is currently employed as a junior technical writer.

Lindsey Harkness has a bachelor of arts degree in English from Lafayette College. Lindsey established a career in higher education administration and earned her MSEd from Northwestern University in 2006. Her early career in higher education led to an interest in other nonprofit organizations, and she currently works as a prospect research officer at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

Erika Jackson is a student at Utah Valley University where she is majoring in behavioral science. She is currently studying abroad in London with Brigham Young University and plans to pursue a career in social work.

Ruth Johnson graduated from the University of Alabama–Huntsville in August 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in English. She is currently taking graduate courses at UAH and plans to pursue a degree in rhetorical composition and writing center theory.

Diana Maley graduated from Furman University in 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies and music. She is currently a development associate at the Peace Center for the Performing Arts in Greenville, South Carolina.

Anna Rae Kathryn Mitchell will graduate from the University of Montana in May 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in English literature. She plans on attending law school to pursue her interest in civil law, and she hopes to continue working with rhetorical studies and women's and gender studies professionally.

Emily Mullins will graduate from Samford University in May 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in psychology. She conducted a spring 2007 research project on undergraduates' assessments of female rhetors in an independent study for her writing minor. Emily plans to study higher education administration or journalism in graduate school.

Meredith Neville will graduate from Furman University in May 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies. She conducted a summer 2007 research project on protest rhetoric, and is examining antiwar rhetoric during the Vietnam era in an independent study in fall 2007. Meredith plans to study rhetoric in graduate school.

John Newby graduated cum laude from Furman University in June 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in history and political science. Originally from Raleigh, North Carolina, John began law school at the University of North Carolina in the fall of 2007.

Andrew Noel is pursuing a bachelor of arts degree in American studies at George Washington University. After graduation in 2010, Andrew plans to work toward a master's or doctoral degree in American studies or anthropology.

Laura Northcutt will graduate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in May 2010 with a double major in peace, war, and defense and international studies.

Emily Parsons will graduate from Furman University in 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies and a concentration in women's studies. She is currently researching the rhetoric of the mid-twentieth-century feminist movement and plans to attend graduate school.

Gavin Payne will graduate from Notre Dame in 2009 with a bachelor of arts degree in economics and international peace studies. He is interested in attending law school, and plans to work in international law and foreign policy.

Eric Pleasant is a student at Texas A&M–Commerce, where he is majoring in mathematics. He is planning to pursue a career in the field of actuarial science.

Jacob Rees will graduate from Brigham Young University in April 2008 with a bachelor of arts degree in English teaching and Russian studies. He is currently teaching English full-time as an intern at Lone Peak High School in Highland, Utah.

Rachel Share graduated from Elizabethtown College in 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in English-professional writing. She is currently a first-year law student at George Washington University with an interest in animal law.

Rebecca Simon graduated from Penn State University in 2007 with a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology and English with an emphasis in rhetoric. She is currently pursuing a career in archaeology and museum studies through research in the field and at the Smithsonian Institution. She hopes to return to school to earn a PhD in archaeology in the future.

Emily Strasser is in her second year at Vassar College in the class of 2010. She is studying English and anthropology and is working as a writing center consultant.

Amber Watson will graduate from Utah Valley University in the spring of 2009 with a bachelor of arts degree in English creative writing and a minor in French. Amber plans to pursue a master's degree.